

Transitional Justice Fellow

The Center for Justice & Accountability (CJA) seeks a candidate with excellent communication and research skills and a keen interest in CJA's mission to apply for a transitional justice fellowship that would start on or around September 1, 2021.

CJA is an international human rights organization dedicated to deterring torture, war crimes, crimes against humanity and other serious human rights abuses through innovative litigation, policy, and transitional justice strategies. CJA partners with victims and survivors in pursuit of truth, justice, and redress. In its transitional justice work, CJA partners with local nongovernmental organizations interested in pursuing justice for atrocity crimes.

Our work has contributed to bringing human rights abusers to justice in U.S., foreign and international judicial forums, and has assisted in pushing forward national accountability efforts through collaboration with local partners. Our recent cases can be found here.

Overview

A fellowship at CJA gives a recent graduate in law, international relations or a related field the opportunity to work for one year as a transitional justice fellow. The transitional justice fellow gains practical experience supporting CJA's technical assistance programs. The fellow will participate in programs designed to strengthen our partners' abilities to pursue justice in post-conflict or transitional countries, including applying a diverse set of tools for human rights advocacy and legal advocacy. Our fellows are an essential and valued part of our team; they gain substantive knowledge in an environment that values effective mentorship and collaboration.

Ideal candidates are third-year law students, judicial clerks, LLM students, or recent law graduates or graduate students with a demonstrated interest in transitional justice, international human rights law, international humanitarian law, or international criminal law. Applicants must have excellent communication and research skills, and must be willing to interact and build effective working relationships with members of CJA's key stakeholder groups, which include legal organizations, victim advocates, government actors, donors, volunteers, and private sector pro bono partners. Foreign language competency provides a distinct advantage, as does a strong understanding of transitional justice processes.

Candidates should come prepared with ideas for external funding sources, but CJA will work with selected candidates to identify appropriate sources of funding and develop proposals. The majority of fellowships at CJA in recent years have been funded by the fellows' educational institution. While the candidate is expected to take the lead, CJA will assist the selected candidate in developing proposals, including specific projects, if appropriate.

Application

To apply, please submit as one consolidated PDF: 1) a cover letter addressing your goals and interests in the position as well as potential funding sources and relevant deadlines and preferred location (San Francisco or Washington, DC), 2) your resume, 3) school transcript, and 4) the names and contacts for three professional references by e-mail to jobs@cja.org.

Refer to "Transitional Justice Fellow" in the subject line. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled. We will begin reviewing applications starting October 1, 2020. We thank all applicants for their interest, but only those being interviewed will be contacted.

CJA is an equal opportunity employer committed to a diverse and inclusive work environment. People of color, women, people with disabilities, and people of diverse sexual orientations and gender identities are encouraged to apply.

Please note: CJA also seeks a legal fellow. While most applicants will apply to only one of these fellowship positions, applicants who wish to apply for both positions may do so. Those applicants should include a note regarding their dual application in the cover letters for each of the fellowship positions.
