Spanish Government's Extradition Requests to Former Senior Salvadoran Military Officials for Their Role in the 1989 Jesuits Massacre Arrive in El Salvador; Simultaneous Transmittal to U.S. Likely

San Francisco, CA -- Today, CJA has confirmed that the formal extradition requests from the Spanish Government have arrived in El Salvador, with simultaneous transmittal to the United States likely, for fifteen former members of the Salvadoran military, including members of the high command. The defendants have all been charged with conspiracy to assassinate and the assassination of 5 Spanish Jesuits and 3 Salvadoran citizens. Of these requests, 13 are for defendants in El Salvador, and 2 are for defendants in the United States.

This is the next dramatic step in the Jesuits Massacre Case pending in Spain which seeks accountability for the 1989 massacre of six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her daughter. The case was filed in 2008 by the Center for Justice & Accountability (CJA) and the Spanish Pro Human Rights Association (APDHE) against members of the Salvadoran military.

In May 2011, after carefully reviewing all the evidence presented by CJA and APDHE lawyers, Judge Eloy Velasco issued an indictment which described a far-reaching conspiracy to massacre the Jesuit priests formulated at the highest levels of the Salvadoran military and the National Intelligence Directorate (DNI).

Spain seeks the extradition of two defendants who reside in the U.S.: Defendant Inocente Orlando Montano, colonel and Vice Minister of Public Security at the time of the massacre and defendant Héctor Ulises Cuenca Ocampo, lieutenant and member of the DNI. CJA brought Montano's whereabouts to the attention of U.S. officials who arrested him in August of last year. He is currently being held under house arrest in Massachusetts stemming from criminal charges for lying about his role in the Salvadoran military on multiple immigration applications. The U.S. government has until February 9, 2012 to issue a formal indictment of Montano on immigration fraud, perjury or related charges.

The military officers in El Salvador whose extradition has been requested by Spain are: Rafael Humberto Larios López, Minister of Defense at the time of the murders; Juan Orlando Zepeda Herrera, colonel and at the time of the massacre, Vice Minister of Defense; Óscar Mariano Amaya Grimaldi, member of the Atlacatl battalion; Antonio Ramiro Ávalos Vargas, sergeant of the Atlacatl; Guillermo Alfredo Benávides Moreno, colonel and Director of the Military Academy; Juan Rafael Bustillo Toledo, general and Air Force Commander; Joaquín Arnaldo Cerna Flores, colonel and Chief of the Joint General Staff; Francisco Elena Fuentes, Chief of the First Infantry Brigade; José Ricardo Espinoza Guerra, lieutenant of the Atlacatl battalion; Gonzalo Guevara Cerritos, sub-lieutenant of the Atlacatl battalion deported by the US in 2007; Carlos Mauricio Guzmán Aguilar, Salvadoran army colonel, and Director of the National Directorate of Intelligence (DNI); Óscar Alberto León Linares, commander of the Atlacatl and Tomás Zarpate Castillo, sergeant at the Atlacatl.

On the morning of November 16, 1989, after a decade of conflict and military repression in El Salvador, the world woke up to the news that six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and the housekeeper’s daughter... had been brutally murdered. A Truth Commission report revealed that the Salvadoran military planned and committed the crimes against the priests, who were outspoken critics of the military dictatorship. For the past 21 years, all efforts to obtain justice in El Salvador have been thwarted. In explaining the basis for the issuance of the indictment and the arrest warrants, the judge explains that any claim of double jeopardy should fail because the 1990 trial held in El Salvador was a "sham trial."
CJA and APDHE originally filed the criminal case before the Spanish National Court on November 13, 2008 against members of the Salvadoran High Command and the Atlacatl battalion for their role in the Massacre. Among the victims: Ignacio Ellacuría, Ignacio Martín-Baró, Segundo Montes, Amando López, and Juan Ramon Moreno, who were born and ordained in Spain; and father Joaquin López y López, Elba Ramos and her 15-year-old daughter Celina Meredith were Salvadoran.
